

N. Scott Robinson

world music and percussion

“Anyone who enjoys the work of Codona should find Things That Happen Fast the kind of music to which they are, in fact, likely to wish to return to again and again.”

- Jazz Journal International

“The compositions are strong, and Robinson should be commended for the unique timbres he blended in each one. World View is a breath of fresh air.”

- Percussive Notes

“That he has mastered his instruments and has studied the masters well is evident in every tone.”

- Drums and Percussion

Biography

World percussionist N. Scott Robinson is an eclectic and engaging musician suitable for a wide range of audiences, from university appearances to concert halls. Blending his background in jazz and classical music with detailed studies of various world musics, Scott's music functions as a vehicle for contemporary composition and improvisation.

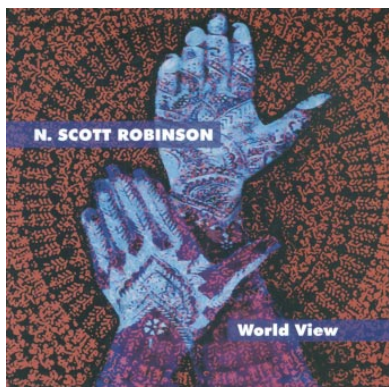

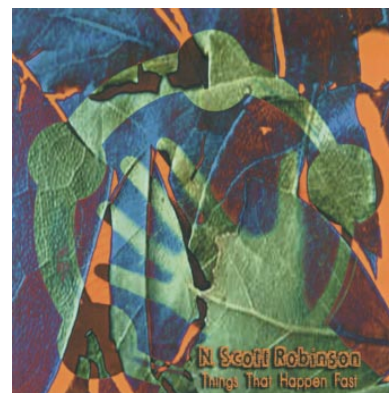

Located in Maryland in Baltimore County, Scott has always lived close to urban centers such as New York where he has had access to the latest developments in contemporary music and jazz as well as opportunities for study with traditional musicians from Africa, India, the Middle East, and Brazil. His subsequent development as a solo performer, collaborator, and composer has led him to create a highly original style drawing on diverse percussion traditions from several cultures. Scott has performed at Carnegie Hall, Kennedy Center, Apollo Theater, Cathedral of St. John, Knitting Factory, and internationally in Korea, Japan, and Australia. He has been featured several times at the Lotus World Music Festival, Percussive Arts Society International Conventions & Days of Percussion, Korea Drum Festival, Seoul Drum Festival, Seoul & Busan Improvisation Festivals, and the Baltimore International Rhythm Festival. Artists that Scott has worked with previously include Benny Carter, Paul Winter, Glen Velez, John Cage, George Crumb, R. Carlos Nakai, and Malcolm Dalglish, among others.

Scott brings a wealth of experience to the performing stage with a style of music that is both widely accessible and artistically rich. His vocal and multi-instrumental performances typically feature him on the riq (Arabic tambourine), bodhran (Irish frame drum that he plays with Indian and Persian hand techniques), sanza (finger piano from Central Africa), berimbau (Brazilian musical bow), hindewhu (Central African pygmy whistle), and Tuvan overtone singing.

Scott believes in outreach and regularly holds workshops, clinics, and residencies on contemporary world percussion techniques and multi-cultural education as part of his travels for performances. N. Scott Robinson is available either as a solo performer or in residency as a collaborator with school or university students.

Scott's world music trio Handful is another option for presenters desiring Scott's ensemble music featured on his CDs World View (1994) and Things That Happen Fast (2001). The music of Handful follows in Scott's multi-cultural approach featuring three percussionists in a wide range of songs and compositions and instruments such as amadinda (large xylophone from Uganda), mbira dza vadzimu & karimba (finger pianos from Zimbabwe), pandeiro (Brazilian tambourine), congas (Cuban hand drums), and ghaval (Azerbaijani frame drum), among others.
